

The final act of "accidental" exposure was just a part of the tastelessness of the entire superbowl half-time show. This "entertainment" was rife with extremely suggestive, non-traditional sexual innuendo, suggesting S&M, group sex and other acts that have no place on public TV during prime time hours. While this may or may not be the result of MTV's usual trash, it is the FCC's responsibility for not demanding family-oriented entertainment for the show. Somebody assumed (ASS-U-ME) that the people performing would make a decent show; if this committee has ever watched MTV, they would know that that station does not know what decent programming is about. I am infuriated that we were subjected to this show. WHO NEEDED THE PAY-PER-VIEW LINGERIE BOWL? I GOT IT FOR FREE ON PUBLIC TV!!!